The Fall of Schumacher Furs

What follows are my opinions and only my opinions. This web page may contain inaccurate and uninformed opinions, however, and as such you are encouraged to not accept anything you read here as being even remotely accurate, and you're also encouraged to do your own research into the history of the destruction of the Schumacher Furs® company.

Eventually this web site will contain links to a detailed history of this battle against what's arguably a totally repugnant industry which has been obsolete for decades and which is attempting to fight against its own inevitable extinction.

Personally I don't eat meat, I have a cow skin hat that I wear in the mountains and in the Mojave Desert, and I would never wear some dead animal's fur. Also I would never picket or protest a fur store unless its owners and operators engaged in highly abusive or criminal acts against innocent people which needed to be exposed and opposed. At the same time I recognize that these picketers and protesters have every right to do what they do and that they hold the moral high ground in this national debate.

NOTE: PDF files are available at <http://www.earthfirst.ws/>

The people of Portland, Oregon have spoken: Furrier company Schumacher Furs® is no longer wanted in town. The companies that sell animal furs and skins for humans to wear are obsolete and, in most American citizen's opinions, extremely disgusting if not outright immoral for dealing in what is essentially an unnecessary, inexcusable industry.

Most Americans eat meat and most Americans are willing to accept the wearing of animal skins if such animals are slaughtered for food. The "byproducts" from the meat-animal food industry that would otherwise be wasted by being discarded are generally recognized as being legitimate to use for clothing, shoes, and accessories.

In Portland, Oregon local citizens decided to voice their widely-held opinions about the animal fur and skin industry by picketing and protesting one of its most visible representative: Schumacher Furs which has been in business for over one hundred ten years, apparently spanning four generations of Schumachers.
